Katharina Heyer is Assistant Professor of Political Science at the University of Hawai‘i at Manoa. She teaches classes in disability law, disability politics, constitutional law, and sociolegal studies, and serves as the principal advisor for the undergraduate Law and Society Certificate. Her research is guided by the sociolegal inquiry into the meaning of rights and rights consciousness: what does it mean to claim disability rights? How do rights inform identity? She is working on a manuscript, entitled "Rights on the Road: Disability Politics in Japan, Germany and the U.S." that examines the impact of the Americans with Disabilities Act on disability rights activism in Japan and Germany. Other research interests include research ethics, assisted suicide, and the politics of death and dying.
